

The 5th Conference (2019)

«Cognitive Science in Moscow: New Research»

The second call

Registration is now open for the 5th biannual conference “Cognitive Science in Moscow: New Research” to be held on 19 June 2019. The conference is held by the Russian Journal of Cognitive Science with support of the International Institute of Psychosomatic Health, the Institute of Practical Psychology and Psychoanalysis and the Scientific Research Institute of Neuropsychology of Speech and Writing.

This year the conference will take place at Moscow, Burakova ul. 27/4 (Metro: “Shosse Entusiastov”, Moscow Central Circle (MCC) station: “Shosse Entusiastov”). The conference will begin at 11:00 AM and end at 8:00 PM.

The event continues the series of poster conferences held in June biannually. Information on the first four conferences and online open access version of the conference abstracts and conference proceedings can be found on the Conference website at <http://conf.virtualcoglab.ru>

The registration is open online until 16 June 2019, midnight (Moscow Time): <http://conf.virtualcoglab.ru/2019/2019attendeereg.html>. Registration of presenting authors and members of organization and program committees proceeds via organization committee.

The main aim of the Conference is to provide a forum for scientists working in the field of cognition (including bachelors, masters and PhD students) to communicate their findings and discuss them with colleagues.

The Conference also aims to promote poster presentations. Compared to oral presentations, poster presentations allow for more comfortable and less formal discussion of presented results. Because the Conference organizers hope to demonstrate the advantages of posters, the event will once again host only poster presentations; there will be no oral presentation sessions.

The Conference topics include empirical (experimental) studies of cognition and its neurobiological and sociocultural bases, conducted in any discipline and approach, as well as studies in cognitive modeling and artificial intelligence. This year innovative projects on methodological issues would also be presented: standardized stimulus databases, atlases, programming, etc. According to our previous experience, such applications are of the utmost interest to Conference participants.

The call for papers was held in April 2019 and is now closed. All papers were peer-reviewed. More than one hundred papers were selected after the peer-review. The preliminary conference Program (the list of selected Poster presentations) can be found on the website: <http://conf.virtualcoglab.ru/2019/2019accepted.html>

We also plan to complement the main program with practical demonstrations and methodological workshops. The applications for practical demonstrations and methodological workshops will be accepted until 1 June 2019 via coglab@virtualcoglab.org. The abstracts of workshops held at the last conference can be found on the website <http://conf.virtualcoglab.org/2017/2017program.html#demos>.

Conference proceedings book will be published shortly before the beginning of the event (practical demonstrations and methodological workshop abstracts will not be included in the volume). The conference proceedings will be indexed by the Russian Science Citation Index. The book will be also published online in open access.

The authors of the best poster presentations will be invited to submit their research as a brief report in English to a special issue of the Russian Journal for Cognitive Science (<http://cogjournal.org>).

Eight years ago, the Conference was launched among the Moscow society of cognitive researchers, which is reflected in its title today. Each year, the number of participants from different cities and even different countries has grown. This year, the researchers from Moscow, Saint Petersburg, Yaroslavl, Samara, Chelyabinsk and Berlin will participate in the Conference.

We highly encourage our colleagues from cities beyond Moscow to participate in the Conference. Unfortunately, the organizing committee has no facilities to cover participants' travel or accommodation fees. Virtual or remote participation in the Conference is not possible at this time.

The official languages of the Conference are: Russian and English. Despite the fact that there are few English-speaking participants this year, we kindly ask our participants to be prepared to present their research in English as well as in Russian.
